President's Column Chris Radeff

I celebrated my birthday this month. I do not get all introspective about my life when I turn another year older, nor do I "take stock", whatever that means. No, I'm pretty happy with my life – pending a ruling from one particular District Court Judge, thank you very much – and figure it's worked out nicely. I am pretty much a "what you see is what you get" person, who just happens to have a few Rules in Life that have gotten me far, or perhaps on some watch list. Either way, let me share them with you:

- You cannot work for me if you have not seen Dirty Dancing, Footloose and Top Gun.
- Tacos should not contain fish. It is unnatural.
- You must have at least one "I can only tell you this" friend.
- Hearsay isn't for the truth of the matter asserted, but for the necessary lie of the moment.
- You must laugh at least once per day.
- Books should be made from paper, not megabits.
- Cake is one of the four food groups.
- If you liked the movie Interstellar you are dead to me.
- Whereas if you did not like The Big Chill you are also dead to me.
- The Rockies will win a World Series in my lifetime.
- Festivus really is for the rest of us.
- Rhyming makes everything more interesting.
- I assume that just about everything involves a conspiracy in some form or another (thus that watch list I mentioned).
- Second day hair is a fashion choice.
- All of us are just Six Degrees of Separation from Kevin Bacon
- All computer passwords should be "Password"
- Like Mick said, you really can't always get what you want.

Whatever your Rules of Life are, may they bring you happiness and joy and a REALLY good ruling from a particular District Court Judge*. Just saying.

*No judges were influenced by this article. All references to a District Court Judge is solely in the mind of the writer, which is a rather scary place to be, and does not reflect any actual decision pending before any actual Judge.
